MORE THAN JUST AN LL.M.

Exploring European, International and Chinese Law

China and Europe are key players on the world stage. The English-taught Master of European and International Law (LL.M.) prepares Chinese and European legal talents for international careers in a world in which an understanding of European, international and Chinese legal concepts as well as intercultural skills and high proficiency in English are essential.

LL.M. students specialise in European and International Law. Current issues receive special emphasis, as do economic and cultural facets. Courses in the first semester include Legal Research and Writing workshops. International students can replace first semester courses up to 6 credit points with courses from the Chinese Law Taught in English programme. These courses cover various aspects of Chinese Public and Civil Law and the legal transformation in the People's Republic of China. The China-EU School of Law supports students who opt to learn Chinese during their studies.

The future looks bright

In 2016, 97 % of the graduates found employment or pursued further study within three months after graduating. They work in international law firms, companies and research institutions as well as EU and Chinese institutions.

MORE THAN JUST A SCHOOL

The first jointly-run Chinese-European law school

The China-EU School of Law (CESL) is an ideal place to sharpen the perspective on the big picture of China-EU legal relations – and the role a legal talent can play. Initiated by the People's Republic of China and the European Union in 2008, CESL was the first Chinese-foreign law school. In 2018, CESL is celebrating its 10-year anniversary.

Excellent partners

The school is supported by 16 long-term partner universities in China and Europe. Eleven belong to the best universities in the world according to the 2018 QS World University Ranking. The China University of Political Science and Law and Universität Hamburg are the coordinators of the school.

A Flying Faculty

Students are taught by selected professors from the 13 European partner universities. Additionally, European assistant professors teach permanently in Beijing to ensure continuity. Since many lecturers fly back and forth between China and Europe several times a year, they are called the 'Flying Faculty'.

Personal support

Application, visa, student card, access to the library: CESL's programme administrators help international students prepare for their year in Beijing. Additionally, a local student is assigned as a buddy to assist international students and help them settle in after arriving.

"Teaching at the China-EU School of Law was exciting, and it inspired me. The students were highly committed, hardworking and willing to question inherited beliefs."

MORE THAN JUST A CITY

An inspiring metropolis

The China-EU School of Law's location in the Changping district, a northern suburb of Beijing, allows students to explore the cultural, legal and political heart of China. Changping is also an excellent base for exploring downtown Beijing: the city centre is a 45-minute subway ride from campus.

A rich cultural heritage

Major attractions such as the Ming Tombs and Jundu Mountain Range are around 15-30 minutes by bus from campus. The Great Wall is about one hour by car.

A place to live

International students are provided accommodation in the dormitory at the International Exchange Centre on the Changping campus. A standard room is shared by four students. It costs approximately 5,250 yuan per person per academic year. Students can also live in an apartment close to campus. A small apartment costs around 3,500 yuan per month. Shopping centres, banks, a post office, hotels and restaurants are all within walking distance of campus. For living expenses – food, books, medical insurance, transportation, social activities, etc. – international students usually spend 2,500 yuan per month.
